Retirement with Dignity

We all work hard for a living. We accept that responsibility.

But we want to know that after we have given years of service to patients and the community that we will have the ability to live comfortably in retirement.

“I’m proud of the care I have given to patients over the years.

Now, I’m working with our negotiating team to make sure we are treated in retirement with the same dignity we give to our patients”

–Pam Scott, Mercy

Too many working people are being forced to work longer and when we do get to retire we are living on tiny budgets that force us to choose between prescriptions and rent.

That’s why, as your SEIU union negotiating team, we are working hard to reach a contract that improves our retirement security.

We want to make Allina the best place to work, the best place to get care, and a workplace known for treating its retirees with dignity.
